

IMMIGRATION (Facebook)

“Are Democrats serious about border enforcement? It’s supposed to be the trigger that would allow illegal immigrants to start on the path to citizenship.”

“Why is a trigger necessary? To prevent a repeat of the 1986 fiasco where amnesty was granted and border enforcement never came — giving us today’s 11 million living in the shadows. Yet just a week ago Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, referring to border enforcement, averred that relying on one thing as a so-called trigger is not the way to go. Regarding legalization, there needs to be certainty. But not for border security?”

“And she’s the person in charge of securing that border. Now listen to President Obama: Given the size of the border, it’s never going to be 110 percent perfect. What we can do is to continue to improve it.”

“The usual Obama straw man. Who’s asking for 110 percent enforcement? And the need is for something a lot more than just improvement. The objective is to reduce a river to a trickle. It’s doable. The two border sections with triple fencing outside San Diego reduced infiltration by 92percent. (If the president tells you that fences don’t work, ask him why he has one around the White House.)”

“I think Obama needs to see what he is doing. Each day a parent is taken away from a child. It’s tears apart family.”

“First major victory of the day! Senator Chuck Grassley's poison pill amendment has been defeated but there are more hurdles to overcome before immigration reform is made reality.”

“I think it is a great victory, but we shouldn’t get to confident. As they say, We have won the battle but not the war.”
