Homelessness

I am going to take action by supporting the homeless. I'm going to make a fundraiser so they can be happy, and not think, "Will I be able to eat tomorrow? Will I have a roof to sleep under? Will I survive?" I'm going to take action, and support them in every way I can. I'll be there by their side, and just keep them calm. Help is out there.

People should stop giving them money because who knows if they are faking it. You might give them like a $20 dollar bill, and they go spend it on something that is really bad for them. They can buy drugs with that or a beer. Giving them money is not enough because they might buy a hamburger or a sandwich, but that's all for the day. The next day will come, and they will need money to eat again, but they won't have any.

I will also take them to a hospital to cure them, because some of them need help. Not like any normal help, but some real help because sometimes, I find some of them talking to themselves. I think to myself that they must be going through a really hard time. This is not a joke, this is serious. There are homeless people all over the world, and we need to do something about this. They need our support to stop homelessness. We have to make some changes in our world. I want it to be a better place for them.
