

I really support Barack Obama because he would make changes that could make the world a better place. He would actually help many people like the Hispanics. He is very different than other people who have run for President. He would also help people to stop polluting the world we live in. There have been many hurricanes this year, and it's probably from the pollution that causes the heat to form them. The carbon dioxide from all the pollution helps the sun's rays form a massive hurricane that can destroy many homes and lives. A lot of people who have experienced hurricanes have lost families or friends. Obama has done a great job of running against John McCain for President. I also think there should be an end to the Iraq war because many lives have been lost, and it is bad because families have lost members who fought for their country. Obama can also help these people a lot. He can also help end this war that is destroying many innocent lives and messing up our world. Barack Obama can also be a very good President and a great leader who helps many people. I think he will make a great President if elected. If I could, I would vote for Barack Obama
