

I think Barack Obama should be President because he believes in our country. He believes in change and most of all, he believes in the people. I also think that he would make a good President because our country has never had an African-American President. And I believe he can make a difference in communities with racism because if people see him as a good man, then people will accept him as President and as a person. I know that he knows what the people have gone through in the past and what they will go through in the future, so I know that he will be there to support them.

Jasmin Bonilla, 8th Grade, Junior Academy, Raul Yzaguirre School For Success, Houston, Texas