

In my opinion, Barack Obama will be a perfect President of the United States of America because he thinks about the poor people. I know that he will help immigrants or people who need help. He is the first African-American person who has been selected by the Democratic Party. Obama has made history because of this. If he wins the job of being the President, he will even make more history. He and his family think about others before them, and I like that they want to help people who need it. I think this way too. I hope he will win the biggest job in the United States of America. Good luck to him.
