

In my opinion, I think Barack Obama would make a good President because he would be the first African-American, if elected. Plus if he is elected, it might make a difference. He may have been taking drugs as a teen, but he has changed since then. He was also a graduate from Columbia University and Harvard Law School. He practiced as a civil rights attorney before serving in the Illinois Senate. He also taught law at the University of Chicago Law School. So this means that Obama is smart and that he is trying to make a difference in his life. He is also trying to support the people of the United States.

Adriana Lopez, 8th Grade, Junior Academy, Raul Yzaguirre School For Success, Houston, Texas

