

When I hear the words, “Computers and History” I think that it is talking about computers that will help us study our Texas History or any kind of history. Computers are already history. The first computer that was made was in 1943 by Charles Babbage known as the “Father of the Computer”. Computers have changed people’s lives in so many ways. One of them is that many people work in a computer lab, teaching technology that deals with computers and more. History is a subject in school where all the students take this subject. For example, people in Texas have to know the history of Texas. When you put these two things together, the students can be studying history on a computer, also by doing projects about history. I think this is a good idea.
