

People around the world use computers to gain information about history. A computer is a machine that uses data according to a list of instructions. Computers have been around for awhile, for example, one of the first computers built was in the mid 20th century. All the history in the world can be found on computers through the Internet on some famous websites like Yahoo, Wikipedia, Google and more. Google can give you different kinds of websites based on history. Wikipedia gives you the information you need immediately as soon as you type it in. Yahoo works as good as Google, just different websites. If you're looking for any information involving history, find it on the computer.

Fabian Ornelas, 7th grade, Raul Yzaguirre School For Success