

Computers can help study in history by using a certain type of software such as Microsoft Word. When our history teacher asks us to write an essay, we can do some research on the computer like history on a certain person, Sam Houston. We can use our computers to discover some information that is not shown in the social studies book. Sometimes our teacher wants neat work for projects and asks us to print out some information or type it, so we try our best to use computers for our knowledge and learn more about history. Did you know computers were invented early in 1936 and are now used until 2009? So many people use computers for classes and learning much faster. Computers help me a lot in history class. They help me find pictures, websites, information and a lot more stuff. First off, I'd like to say before computers, they had to use books which had a lot of information, but hard to find. It took days, so the person who invented computers thought about fixing this and invented computers.

Jonathan Pena, 7th grade, Raul Yzaguirre School For Success